Lewis, Kennedy, Murray Talk With President Who Says Coal Must Be Mined.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt's conference with steel company and mine union officials, aimed at settling the captive coal mine dispute, broke up after 30 minutes today without any immediate announcement.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The policy committee of the United Mine Workers voted today to continue the UMW's fight for a union shop in the coal mines which supply the nation's big steel mills.

The committee directed the union's executive officers to "continue their efforts to secure a settlement" in the controversy to conform to the provisions of the Appalachian agreement.

Under this agreement, all commercial soft coal mines have granted a union shop to the CIO union. The defense mediation board recently rejected the union's demand for a union shop in the steel companies' coal mines.

The committee adopted a resolution commending and approving the action of Philip Murray, CIO president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the mine workers, and other CIO officials in resigning from the mediation board as a result of the board's decision in the mine case.

The resolution said that the policy committee would "stand by to receive further reports from the executive officers" pending a conference at the White House with President Roosevelt and steel company officials.

The resolution was adopted after John L. Lewis, UMW president, Murray and Kennedy had reviewed recent developments in the dispute.

Report U. S. and British Navies Balk Sub Attacks

LONDON —(U.P.)— The United States and British navies were reported by British sources today to have carried out "highly successful action" against a new German U-boat and airplane offensive in the battle of the Atlantic.

The destruction of "many U-boats" due to improved patrol work by the British and American naval forces was reported.

"The lack of success of a new German offensive in which submarine attacks on convoys have been increased recently may be attributed to three factors," one British naval source said.

"First, there has been an increase in efficiency of escorts for convoys.

"Second, there has been increased destruction of the long-range German spotting airplanes which tip off the submarines as to convoy positions.

"Third, the Germans have suffered a decrease in personnel for manning submarines."

Miss Sheline surrendered to authorities in Denver last month.

Two of The News-Journal's wire services today said the plane had been reported at Pahlevi on the Caspian sea, but a third service cabled from Teheran that Soviet embassy has no news of the planes, late today.

Note Mystifies Parents of Girl In Death Leap

AKRON —(INS)— A grief-stricken family tried today to discover the meaning of a mysterious note left by their daughter, Geraldine Cook, 14, before she committed suicide by jumping off the North Main street viaduct.

Her father, Theodore Cook, to whom the note was addressed, said he could not understand what his daughter meant when she wrote:

"Dear Daddy: I am sorry but I can't stand it to be laughed at by everyone. Please forgive me. Love, Chickie."

Cook said "Chickie" was his daughter's nickname.

A Buchtel high school student, the girl jumped from the east rail of the bridge before three youths who were walking close by could stop her.

The note and Geraldine's wristwatch were brought to the Cook home several hours after her death by a young girl whose identity was not learned.

Prosecutor, Sheriff's Office At Odds Over Procedure In Raiding Tavern.

Prosecutor Harold Lutz and Sheriff Frank E. Robinson's office are at sharp odds over the procedure followed by deputy sheriffs and a state liquor agent Tuesday night in raiding the Mayfair Inn, eight miles west of Mansfield on U. S. Route 30-N, it was revealed today.

Officers found gambling equipment valued at $18,000 in a second-floor room of the tavern and later arrested George Talbot, 38, Lorain, who was allegedly in charge of the tavern when the authorities walked in.

Although the prosecutor denied that he had said anything to Sheriff Robinson or his deputies about the manner in which the raid was conducted, he told The News-Journal today that he believed the officers raided the tavern at the wrong time and failed to obtain any evidence that the gambling equipment was being operated."

Hurtt was one of 12 Akron university students to sign the petition.

Two U. S. Soldiers Cited In Fatal Shooting of Icelander

REYKJAVIK, Iceland—The press today angrily warned Icelanders to avoid contact with American soldiers as much as possible in view of a shooting affray in which two U. S. soldiers are held for the death of an Icelandic fisherman.

The soldiers were privates Everett Farmer, Huntington, W. Va., and Charles H. Cox, McKee, Ky. They are held for court martial on charges of voluntary manslaughter in the killing of Thordur Sigurdsson, 22, fisherman, in a row outside a cafe at nearby Hafnarfjordu the night of Nov. 8.

Sigursson died Nov. 11 of a bullet wound in the stomach. The press urged all natives to avoid the U. S. troops wherever possible to prevent further friction.

"These soldiers are carrying guns in violation of specific regulations," the newspapers charged.

U. S. army officials said there was no evidence that the killing of Sigursson was premeditated.

Two other American soldiers, Privates Audie Johnson, Clearfield, Ky., and Eugene McGinnis, Posey, W. Va., were present at the altercation but left before the shooting started. They were not held.

LOSS SAID 'NOT HEAVY'

Russians Drive Foe Out of 20 Villages, Pierce Leningrad Lines.

(By Associated Press)

The three-year-old, $16,000,000 aircraft carrier Ark Royal was torpedoed late yesterday east of Gibraltar, probably by an Italian submarine, and sank early today despite a desperate effort to bring the listing giant safely to port.

She carried down with her an undisclosed number of her crew of about 1,600 men who remained aboard in the struggle to save the ship.

"A very large number of the ship's company was taken off," the admiralty said, and indications were that personnel losses were "fortunately not heavy."

The story of the sinking, pieced together from the admiralty's brief announcement and word in authoritative quarters was that the Ark Royal was not in action when she was torpedoed and that she was en route to Gibraltar.

The strong suggestion was that an Italian submarine was the victor, although there was no positive identification.

The 22,000-ton floating airfield was the third aircraft carrier lost by Britain in the war and the newest of them all.

Only in an "obituary" of the Ark Royal did the admiralty indi-

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— The office of production management today impounded all stocks of magnesium and ordered that the metal be allocated only for use in such defense products as airplanes and incendiary bombs.

The order provides for the freezing of stocks in "whatever form or by whomever held." Supplies will be allocated on a monthly basis by the OPM.

ORDERS MARINES TO LEAVE CHINA

President Reveals Withdrawal Starts Soon; About 1,000 Now on Duty There.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— President Roosevelt today announced that the United States had decided to withdraw American marines from China.

The president read to his press conference a brief announcement stating that the detachments maintained ashore at Peiping, Tientsin and Shanghai would be withdrawn.

The president said the actual withdrawal was expected to begin shortly.

Asked whether he thought the withdrawal of the only American armed forces now on land in China would leave any substantial American interest unprotected, the president pointed out that the marine stations had offered protection to comparatively few Americans. Most of our nationals in China are missionaries situated outside the three cities where the marines are stationed.

According to recent naval reports, marine forces in China are disposed as follows:

SHANGHAI — Fourth marines, 750 officers and men. Commanded by Col. Samuel L. Howard.

TIENTSIN—A detachment of 55 officers and men commanded by Maj. Luther A. Brown.

PEIPING — American embassy guard of 165 officers and men under command of Lieut. Col. William W. Ashurst.

The marines have been in China intermittently since 1854, when

The engineer suffered a badly crushed arm and head injuries. An infection which developed in the arm was reported as largely responsible for his death.

FDR Ready to Sign 'Freedom Of Seas' Bill

House Passes Measure Lifting Major Shipping Restrictions With Vote Of 212-194; President Can Send Vessels Into Combat Zones.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The navy today ordered immediate preparations to arm American merchant ships as President Roosevelt—happy over his greatest congressional victory on foreign policy—awaited delivery of the bill repealing all major shipping restrictions in the neutrality act.

The final seal of congressional approval was written by the house after a hectic battle in which it approved senate amendments to its armed ship bill by a vote of 212 to 194. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to sign the measure Monday.

Congress, by repealing the neutrality act ban on arming of merchant ships and sending them through combat zones to belligerent ports, gave Mr. Roosevelt vast authority in the field of foreign relations.

He may now send U. S. ships from U. S. ports, laden with munitions, to the docks in Liverpool, to China, to Russia, or any belligerent port. He may, legislative experts say, use his authority as commander-in-chief to order the American navy and air service to convoy ships through submarine infested zones.

In its action congress turned its back on a unique experiment to keep the nation out of foreign wars. It repealed all major provisions of an act first enacted six years ago. It abandoned law to keep merchant ships out of war zones, and thus avoid incidents which may cause war, in favor of a policy permitting the president to order ships to sail the seven seas to deliver munitions to enemies of the Axis nations.

The house stood by the president after a tumultuous two-day debate, with some foes of the proposal asserting that it was tantamount to a war declaration. Speaker Sam Rayburn, however, declared that approval was more likely to preserve peace than defeat.

Sen. Wheeler (D., Mont.) leader of the non-interventionists, refused to concede that the vote plunges the nation into war. He declared that the battle against war would continue.

While Secretary of the Navy Knox prepared to arm ships, only President Roosevelt could say whether American vessels will be-

BRITISH HAIL REPEAL OF BAN

'They're Coming Over' Say Headlines In London Paper; Axis Quiet.

(By Associated Press)

Repeal of vital sections of the U. S. neutrality act was hailed by an authoritative British source today with "much gratification" while the press and public greeted the congressional action with jubilation which the Daily Express put into this banner headline, in letters big enough for a major war victory!

"They're Coming Over!"

This referred specifically to reopening of British seaports to American merchant ships. How soon and how fast American vessels loaded with lend-lease materials would reach Britain immediately became a subject of speculation.

The source in London said today repeal of the important provisions of the U. S. neutrality act would "refresh and reinvigorate the will of the British people to fight the war to victory."

The British press and public also acclaimed the United States' action as a step toward fuller American war collaboration.

The authoritative statement said:

"News of the repeal of the principal remaining provisions of the neutrality act has been received

SOLDIERS TENSE

Hear Reports They Must Be on Alert For Strike Duty.

HATTIESBURG, Miss.—(AP)— A tenseness gripped the more than 19,000 soldiers in the 37th (Ohio) division today as reports spread that they must be "on the alert" for possible strike patrol duty.

"On the alert" means they must be prepared to move within 24 hours after receiving orders. While officers denied reports that all furloughs had been cancelled, it was learned that some leaves had been terminated abruptly.

Officers in some regiments began instructing their men in strike patrol duty, and winter clothing was issued to the troops, which led to speculation whether they might be assigned to Pennsylvania or West Virginia coal fields.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, the 37th's commanding officer, was in Washington conferring with the general staff.

Inquiries Pour In on City as Levy Assures Fire Equipment

Although only 10 days have passed since Mansfield voters showed their approval of a half mill fire tax levy in a record-breaking vote, city officials are being showered with inquiries from various fire equipment companies, anxious to sell the apparatus needed to modernize the citys' fire department.

Mayor W. J. Locke revealed today that at least a half dozen companies had contacted him, making inquiries about the specifications the Mansfield equipment would need and outlining the advantages of their various pieces of apparatus.

Fire Chief Charles Seeburger and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton announced that they had also received letters from apparatus and hose manufacturers, asking when the city would call for bids on new equipment.

The mayor stated that the city would be guided in its purchases by the specifications set up by the Fire Underwriters' board. This would probably help to make the city eligible for a better fire protection classification with lower fire insurance premiums.

Purchase of new equipment or the letting of contracts for the remodeling of the No. 1 and No. 4 fire stations would be made by the

TRAINING FOR 400 AVAILABLE AT 2 CENTERS

Handley Reports Bureau Has 1,000 Requests For Workers Skilled In Defense.

Facilities to train 400 Mansfielders for positions in defense industry are available at both the Charles Mill NYA resident center and at Mansfield Senior high school, C. W. Handley, manager of the Ohio bureau of unemployment compensation, said today.

"All those taking the training," he continued, "would virtually be assured of a job in defense industry as soon as they completed their courses because we have on hand right now at least 1,000 requests from Ohio industrialists for workers."

So far, he said, response of Mansfielders unemployed by priority curtailment of work in city plants have not been large. Of the approximately 900 workers laid off by the Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing company, only 34 have applied for training, Handley said.

As a result of a meeting of union men, Mansfield industrialists and representatives of the Office of Production Management in Washington, union leaders have been urging members of their locals to apply for the training and Handley said he hoped larger applications would follow.

Unemployed youths from 17 to 24 years old may receive training at Charles Mill both as residents and as non-residents.

Those living at the camp will receive their regular $30 pay from the federal government, $18 of which is charged for room and board. Those living at home will receive $25 a month.

Trainees at Senior high school receive no pay while training, but are eligible for workers unemployment compensation.

Periods of training range from three to six months.

He did not state when or where Pan-American will put its converted boats into operation.

LIBRARY'S NEW LIST HAS BOOK ON PUBLICITY

Author, Experienced as Agent, Offers Gay and Instructive Works on That Line.

Publicity chairmen might take a tip from Constance Hope, author of "Publicity Is Broccoli," which makes its appearance on the Mansfield Public Library new book display shelf this week-end.

The author has handled publicity for such celebrities as Lotte Lehmann and Jascha Heifitz, such firms as Longchamps and the Hammond Organ company and her book is said to be gay and instructive.

Another new volume with a humorous angle is "Preacher's Wife," by Ethel Hueston, a biography of the author's mother. It deals with life in the latter part of the nineteenth century as it is lived by a Methodist minister's wife, who brought up 11 children on her husband's meager salary.

EVENING IN SPRING by August Derleth is an idyll of young love—the story of Margery Estabrook and Steve Grandon, high school students in the town of Sac Prarie, Wisconsin, 15 or 20 years ago. There were strong family objections to the meetings of the young lovers, and their elders, a plain-spoken and peppery lot, give the story a humorous tang.

OPINIONS OF OLIVER ALLSTON by Van Wyck Brooks is a delightful, thinly-veiled autobiography made up of memories, observations, opinions and conclusions about his reading, his work, his contemporaries—in short it is a living picture of our world today as seen through the eyes of one of America's most distinguished critics.

SUCKER'S PROGRESS by Herbert Asbury is the first attempt to write a connected history of the most prevalent of venial sins, and traces the history and development of gambling in America from the card and dice games in the back rooms of colonial taverns to the days of Richard Canfield, the last of the great American gamblers. It concludes with a brief summary of modern gambling dominated by gangsters and racketeers. The book is concerned with the picturesque and spectacular features of gambling and only incidentally with its morals.

THE SKIES OF EUROPE by Frederic Prokosch is a panoramic story of a young American's adventures in the old world beloved of the artist, as it gives way to the new order. Its chain of characters and episodes, culminating in a surprising murder, are unfolded against the darkening background which swept Europe more and more swiftly toward the crisis.

As impromptu captain of a small motor launch, A. D. Divine experienced the epic evacuation of Dunkirk at first hand—and he has built a novel around his thrilling adventures. THE SUN SHALL GREET THEM recreates the mood of despair that prevailed before the miraculous achievement of Dunkirk restored faith in the powers of England. The book is full of adventure, thrills, and somber tragedy.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1941.

It's costing more to live in the United States—but it's worth it.

It is also being noticed that the hand-shaking habit has suffered a considerable decline since election.

Hitler now says that, so far as he is concerned, "South America is as far off as the moon"—so inhabitants of the moon, if any, had better be on their guard.

Declaration for Freedom of Seas

WHEN the house of representatives, late yesterday afternoon, agreed to senate amendments to the original neutrality-revision bill the action must be accepted as a declaration of intent to contribute the full power of the United States of America to support of those nations which are engaged in war against Hitlerism and the Axis allies.

While the 18-vote margin by which the house sanctioned the senate's amendment to permit unrestricted freedom of the seas to merchant vessels shows closer division than the original bill to authorize the arming of merchant ships, the action has been as definitely taken as it would have been had a larger majority favored it—and the national course to be pursued must be in accord with that decision.

It has heretofore been quite generally accepted as a fact that the United States is already engaged in the war against the Axis powers, and naval action in the vicinity of Iceland, with loss of American lives and ships, clearly indicates that the greater freedom of action now contemplated will involve dangers that cannot be avoided.

Just how a great nation such as the United States could honorably pursue any other course while the threat of Hitlerism hangs over the world would be hard to understand, yet there is an obvious lack of unity in this country which endangers not only the quick and successful termination of war but lays the Western Hemisphere, and our own country, open to totalitarian aggression.

Past hampering of defense production by strikes, and the present strike threats hanging over rail transportation and coal mines essential to steel production, disclose the long step that must yet be taken by the people of this country, and their government, before the United States can be considered in readiness to devote its full strength to helping win the war.

Whether by much preferred agreements, or by compulsion, there is work that must be done, and no individual or minority group of people can be permitted to stand in the way of national well-being—or to jeopardize their country's future existence.

Looking Toward Better Living

EVEN in the uncertainties of war, and preparation for war, there is evidence that things are shaping for a better future in industrial employment and housing.

Industrial plants in general are much improved, not merely in mechanical efficiency but in their human aspects. Factories are far more cleanly and spacious and better supplied with air, light and warmth. There are many industrial plants where the workers, if they like, can handle their jobs in street clothes without soiling them.

Great improvement, too, is often found now in the homes and general environment of industrial workers. Clean little settlements spring up in the vicinity of mills or mines, in striking contrast with the old-fashioned ugliness.

This kind of progress is more evident so far in England than in our own country, possibly because it was more needed there. Even with Britain in the midst of war, improvements in housing are undertaken on a vast scale. Model towns are built in the fields, in small groups each housing about 100 workers, with all necessary shops and services and modern facilities for community life, centrally heated, and so on. Such developments, no doubt, will be vastly expanded when the war is over.

Reason For the Difference

COMPARISON of the procedure of American organized labor with British organized labor is made by an American newspaper man familiar with the situation in both countries. He writes:

"There are no racketeers in organized labor in England. No labor leader has enriched himself at the expense of the union. No member of a labor union was ever beaten up by the henchmen of a gangster union boss because he stood up in a meeting and voiced his disapproval of his leader's policy, or stated his reasons for voting against a proposed strike.

"The English, the Scots and the Welsh are law-abiding people. No kind of racket can get a foothold among them. They complain, they protest, they get angry, and by strikes they have forced employers to recognize their rights—but they have never resorted to unlawful methods."

And during this war, when continuous production is imperative, they are not striking. They are co-operating loyally with the government.

But, after all, people on the British Isles realize that they are in the war. When that realization comes to workers in this country it is quite unlikely that there will be any more strikes in defense industries, or threats of mine and railroad strikes. Just now there are many people in the United States who do not understand that the future of this nation, as well as their own freedom and lives, depends on ultimate defeat of the Axis powers.

Those Over-Emphasized Vitamins

SPEAKERS at the recent convention of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America devoted much attention to nourishment and vitamins. Dr. R. R. Williams, the man who isolated vitamin B-1 and made it available in usable quantities, was as critical as Dr. Parran, surgeon general of the United States, of the current indiscriminate use of synthetic vitamins as a cure-all.

Except in special cases, the vitamins we need can be better obtained from normal food. Certain ones are there in our green vegetables. Others would be in our grain foods and sugar if we did not over-refine both.

"It is high time," said Dr. Williams, "that we should be taking a detailed census of vitamins' occurrence in foods and exercising every reasonable precaution that our methods of manufacturing, distributing and preparing foods conserve these values and get them to the mouth."

It's a job that ought to appeal to Americans.

It is fine that the added vitamins are available when we need them and that so much is understood of their nature and usefulness. But there's no point in throwing overboard modern knowledge of food chemistry and improved methods of preserving, distributing and preparing natural foods.

Spring's Here Again!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HAVE you seen California in the fall? It's like no autumn that you've seen before. For days there's been a strangeness in the air, this special, Western air which knows no moisture since last spring.

March . . . April . . . May . . . June and July . . . August . . . September. It's October now, and, with each week, the dust has grown deeper on the trails—fine, golden dust whose perfumed powder holds the record of the year—the fragrant, crumbled record of each flower that fell all year: The manzanita's rosy, waxy bell—the fragile shell some snail cast off. Moth wings . . . rose petals . . . aromatic gums . . . berries and grasses . . . and that tarry weed which burns like altar incense when the harvest comes.

The days pass on and yet there is no rain. But now the strangeness deepens. All the strain, the worry and the rush of harvest time have gone. The air's so still it seems as if the sky were filled with hush.

A BUZZARD HANGS, unmoving, on his tilted wing. A dark Sierra jay goes by, his topknot tipped with jet. His flight's a flash of lapis-lazuli. Far up the gully there's a lone, coyote's cry. The long days drift from dawn to noon, from noon to dusk and night. And then, through owl's call, back to dawn again.

And then, one night, there comes a touch of frost! Next morning all the birches glitter through a veil of gilded lace. The oaks are crimson, coral, scarlet and maroon. The hills are tawny as a lioness, her vast pelt sprawled up to the warming sun. Against the pale, bright sky the pines stand, file on file—their bronze boles rising straight through billowed smoke.

There is no wind and yet the air has come alive. Beneath the grass there is a scamper and a squeak—a rustle and a flurry and a whir-r-r! A blue squirrel flings himself against a hoary crag, his tail's a silver fountain on the velvet moss. And, from the soil, there comes a quickening—the very sweat and breath from out the earth's dark flesh. And, with it, all the hoarded fragrance of the woods breaks free. The sharp and oily poignancy of pine. The pungent perfume of the forest floor.

See, the sky's gone gray! Above the peaks the darkness mounts like surf! You lift your hands, your face, you laugh and laugh again! The drought is broken. There's a drop of rain! Great, single drops that fall, at first, without the slightest sound, then gush and gather with a thundering rush until the forest bellows with its calling drums, it's tinkling flutes, and wailing violins!

All night it rains. And then another, on and on. Until, one morn, you wake to sunshine! To sunshine, splashing, gurgling on the soil. And where, last week, the dust was golden deep, today each rod is filagreed with green!

New grass! New grass that comes before the old has passed—the spring before the winter's fairly here! Young sun! April . . . December—tangled all in one.

I think God meant
For age to come like that—
New pride and laughter swelling
In each weary vein—
New hope above the ashes
Of old pain—
With all the perfume
Of our memories
To fill our hearts
With April joy again—
To tell us—
"Waken!
"Spring is here again!"

North Carolina's Example.

North Carolina opened this week an all-out campaign to reveal the beauty of its roadsides and make the highways safer for motorists. Under the direction of the state highway commission, 2,500 workers began removing road signs which enroach on the right of way.

The commission is restrained somewhat in its clean-up by the fact that its jurisdiction does not extend to private property abutting the highways; nonetheless a great improvement in appearance will result. The state's control holds good to a line 50 feet from the center of the paving. A survey of one 14-mile stretch between Raleigh and Clayton indicates how much may be accomplished. There were 219 signs, of which 81 were on the actual right of way and 117 were within the 50-foot zone.

No resistance developed to the plan of the commission. Public sentiment had been stirred by the joint action of civic clubs.—Springfield News-Sun.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Wolf at the Door."

It is as old as human life, the tradition of "the wolf at the door."

In the mind of primitive man, hunger, danger and wolf at the door, had a logical connection.

In the dead of winter, with game scarce and starvation imminent man and wolf alike felt the gnawing pangs.

Then it was the fleet marauders, in their quest for food, trailed even their most feared foe—man—and dared to howl at his threshold!

So in almost every land and language, wolf and hunger became inseparably associated, "wolf at the door" becoming a universal phrase.

The earliest record appearance of this, now figure of speech, in English is in Colyn Cloute by John Skelton, dated about the turn of the 16th century.

Opponents of Lewis In CIO Will Attempt to Oust His Henchmen

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—There will be plenty of fireworks at the CIO convention opening in Detroit Monday, but not over foreign policy if anti-Lewis leaders can help it.

John L.'s opponents are gunning for bigger game than rebuking the grandstanding miner chief's isolationism.

The anti-Lewis forces will concentrate all their efforts on plans to revise the CIO constitution to wrest from Lewis the powers by means of which he has been able largely to control the organization even though not in the driver's seat.

Specifically, the antis will press for three changes:

1—To strengthen the authority of President Phil Murray; 2—Create a permanent, elective office of secretary-treasurer at $7,500 a year; 3—Put the selection and control of subordinate department officials directly in the hands of the president.

Also, the antis will try to eliminate several Lewis henchmen from the ranks of the vice-presidents and the executive council.

James B. Carey, former head of the Electrical and Radio Workers and a vigorous anti-Lewisite, is now secretary as result of Murray's appointment. Because he is an appointed officer, Carey's authority is limited and he has no power over department officials. The anti-Lewis forces propose to give him this control by making the office elective and then electing Carey.

Lewis's reputed choice for this key job is Allan Haywood, CIO organization director and a long-time Lewis henchman. However, inside word is that Carey has enough votes already pledged to insure his election.

The purpose of giving Murray greater control over subordinate CIO officials is to open the way for getting rid of Lee Pressman, general counsel, and several other close Lewis henchmen who owe their jobs to him. It will be brought out at the convention that Pressman is getting $10,000 a year—a salary fixed by Lewis.

Murray Will Run.

MURRAY definitely will be a candidate for re-election.

He is still convalescing from his recent heart attack, but is greatly improved and is willing to take another term provided his authority is strengthened and Carey is elected secretary-treasurer to handle the burden of administrative details.

Outwardly, relations between Lewis and Murray are friendly, but privately they are not. Insiders say that when Lewis visited Murray during his convalescence, Lewis remarked as they parted: "Well, so long, Phil. It was nice to have known you."

While the strategy of the anti-Lewisites is to avoid raising an issue over his isolationism, or any other extraneous question, they are prepared to fight him on it if he injects the matter into the convention. There is very bitter feeling within the CIO against Lewis' isolationist stand and if he touches off this bombshell he'll be in for a hot battle.

Inside word is that Lewis plans to stage one of his melo-dramatic speeches in which he will castigate Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman, the national defense mediation board and the defense administration in general.

Note: A Kansas City Journal is being passed around in CIO circles with much appreciative comment. Titled "The Tinseled Lewis," it reads in part: "John L. Lewis ate oysters on the half shell and sipped wine with Myron C. Taylor in Washington's aristocratic Hotel Mayflower. He was juggling the fate of a group of American citizens, who, in begrimed pit clothes far below the surface, pause at noon to open dinner pails containing cold sandwiches and lukewarm coffee."

Papa's Fault.

ON A week-end visit to his family in Detroit, big, genial OPM Director William Knudsen got a first-hand account of what the defense program he bosses means to young housewives. His recently married young daughter told him about it.

Shopping for home furnishings, she went to a store to buy a six-burner gas range. The salesman shook his head.

"Sorry, but we've only got four-burners," he said. "Six-burners aren't available any more."

"Why not?"

"Ask your father," was the smiling reply.

Franco's Agents.

ELLIS ISLAND is not equipped to receive foreign nobility, yet a Spanish duke, a Spanish marques, and a captain of the Spanish navy were on their way to that unhappy refuge, and were saved only by the protests of the Spanish embassy.

Reason was that Peru is celebrating the fourth centennial of the discovery of the Amazon basin, and a group of distinguished Spaniards had been invited to represent the mother country in the celebration.

But when the state department heard about it, they smelled the noxious odors of fascism and Hitler. This is one of the few times Mr. Hull's boys have been worried about Franco. Suspicious, however, that the Spaniards might be coming not for pageantry but for politics, the state department determined to have a good look at the travelers' credentials.

Thus it was the Marques de Lozoya, the Duque de San Lorenzo, and Captain Francisco Regalado were detained in the port of New York, and then were quietly informed that Ellis Island, not Lima, Peru, was their next stop.

But the Spanish embassy in Washington interposed vehement objections coupled with effusive assurances, and finally the travelers were released. They took the next boat for South America. Wonder if the state department was right?

Merry-Go-Round.

GENERALS are now considered a luxury in the army—at least according to their wives. The ladies complain that they have to pay a luxury tax when they buy the stars for their husbands epaulets. . . . Mrs. Dwight Morrow, mother-in-law of Charles Lindbergh, was a member of the committee which drafted the resolution adopted by the "Constitutional Congress for Freedom" calling for an immediate declaration of war against Germany. . . . Here is a sample of the kind of Axis propaganda being sent over the airways from Italy to the U. S. by Ezra Pound, American Lord Haw-Haw: "The secret service guard of the White House has been done away with and a special bodyguard set up for the president, consisting of Colonel Donovan (co-ordinator of information), Robert Sherwood (famous playwright and a member of Donovan's staff), Jimmy Roosevelt, and Archibald McLeish, (head of the Library of Congress)."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I thought you might like to have this stick or incidental information on Maxwell Anderson . . . When you go to see Helen Hayes in "Candle In the Wind," you will be sitting in on Anderson's 22nd play . . . His first written in collaboration with Laurence Stallings, was "What Price Glory." . . . That was 17 years ago . . . Just before "What Price Glory" went into production Anderson borrowed $500 from the National Bank of Nyack, N. Y. . . . With it he bought a waterfall and three acres of land in a township called New City, a few miles beyond Nyack. He still has that waterfall, and his acres have been increased to 60.

Anderson does all his writing in longhand with pen, in a small, neat, legible script. His writing is done in ledgers, a play to a ledger, and his first script is generally his final one, save for minor revisions. A play is completely worked out mentally before he writes a word . . . He makes few notes, sometimes none at all. His scripts are typed by his wife.

"CANDLE IN THE WIND" is the crystallization of Anderson's thoughts on the Nazi menace . . . The action takes place in Occupied France . . . It is the story of an American actress whose love for a French naval officer leads her to dissipate her fortune and her peace of mind in the effort to obtain his release from a Nazi concentration camp. The summation of these efforts tends to show that common honesty and decency under a totalitarian regime has no more chance than a candle in the wind.

As for Anderson personally—he never has been known to go to a night club . . . He frequently dines at drugstore counters, and in this he is not unlike his confere and fellow member of the Playwrights Company, Robert E. Sherwood . . . He wears tweed suits and in cold weather usually a slipover sweater . . . He hates tuxedos and evening clothes . . . Six or seven years ago when the New York drama critics presented him their award for "Winterset," he was the only male present who wasn't dressed up . . . He came in his usual tweeds . . . The only thing he has ever invested money in has been land . . . He owns a lot of it now in Maine . . . He likes New England, and especially Maine. Maxwell Anderson is slow to arrive at decisions, giving everything careful, measured thought . . . Once, however, he has stated his position, he rarely veers from it. He is a rapid thinker, but a slow talker.

CURIOUSLY enough, though he is the author of many successful and financially remunerative dramas, none of his plays has received unanimous approval of the critics . . . "Winterset," which later won the Critic's own award, opened to a variety of critical opinions, as did, "Key Largo," "Valley Forge," "The Star Wagon," and indeed all of his plays. Now comes "Candle In the Wind," which some critics feel does not quite measure up to expectations . . . Nevertheless, their joy in Helen Hayes is unanimous and unqualified . . . Since its opening, the house has sold out every single night . . . That is good . . . I doubt that you can find a better buy for your $3.30 anywhere in town.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Is that stuff really any good?" "About once a month I get so homesick I have to go home. I can't eat nor sleep right. When I get there and sit with my brothers around the kitchen table working at lessons, while mother patches or knits and dad reads the paper, I'm all right again. But I've made up my mind that I'm going right through and graduate, and encourage my brothers to do the same. Mom says she'd be disappointed if I didn't want to come home often."

As a man of years I envied him—and understood. My hands have always been calloused too, and our home of long ago is still a treasured memory.

Pointed Paragraphs

All you have to do to stir up trouble is tell the truth on all occasions.

Many a man is kept busy today trying to undo the things he did yesterday.

Words of the Wise

A Farmer's Diary

Majoring In Ag.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHEN I came out of the city at the southern edge, I saw a young lad standing with a suitcase in his hand. A sticker on the side read "Ohio State." He was tall, square-shouldered, and his long weather-beaten face appeared strong and innocent. I stopped about 20 feet from where he stood and unlatched the door. Almost instantly he was there.

Graciously he inquired before entering whether he could set his suitcase in the back. When he sat in the car, his thighs were high upon two thin shanks and his knees almost scraped the dash. "You fill that seat quite well," I suggested.

"Yes," he agreed, with a grin that spread widely across his face, "this suits me fine. I oughta be down there by six."

"What course are you taking?" I wondered.

"Ag — Animal Husbandry and Farm Management," he answered. Then, noticing that I looked rather intently at the heel and sole of his left shoe, he added, "I take care of six teams of draft horses, clean out the stables, and load on the manure spreaders. By doing this and other odd jobs, I earn my board and room. It's quite a venture—college. Dad said I could go, but since we live on a rented farm and I have four brothers at home, my schooling is at my own expense."

"Have you seen any of the games?" I asked him.

"I reckon not. I'd like to, but when the band's playing and the shouting's going on, I'm working hard down in the horse barn. There's plenty of ammonia goes to waste—I'm tryin' to think of a way to conserve it. When I told the teacher I wanted that for a project, he sort o' smiled."

THEATERS

Colorful Musical.

"Week-End in Havana," a catchy "filmusical" in technicolor featuring Alice Faye, John Payne, Carmen Miranda and Cesar Romero opens Saturday at the Ohio. Against a colorful backdrop presenting the Latin American capital Alice Faye appears as an American salesgirl on a hard-earned vacation cruise. When her ship is grounded on a reef she refuses to sign a release to the shiping company until she is shown Havana. Peace is kept by a ship representative who postpones his honeymoon to show her the town. John Payne plays the representative and Carmen Miranda appears in her usual role of an exotic club entertainer.

R. A. F. Air Saga.

"International Squadron," thrill-packed film saga of the R. A. F.'s colorful branch of service, opens Saturday at the Madison with Ronald Reagan playing the role of a dare-devil American test pilot who joins the squadron as a lark and becomes one of its heroes. Olympe Bradna, William Lundigan and Reginald Denny are in the cast of this picture that deals with the adventures of the squadron as it engages the enemy in the night skies and fraternizes during the day. The Alhambra airport in California was converted into the R. A. F. London air base for the production and the air scenes are said to be among the most thrilling ever filmed.

Absorbing Story.

Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett are teamed in "Wild Geese Calling," showing at the Ritz with Barton McLane and Warren Williams in the cast. Tex Ritter's "Arizona Frontier," is the second attraction.

Unusual Comedy.

Robert Montgomery plays a guy named "Joe" with a sense of humor and a saxophone in "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," the season's most unusual comedy opening Saturday at the Park. As a contender for the light heavyweight championship of the world Jordan comes to an untimely end in a plane crash. His spirit returns to earth to stalk about his old-time friends and create a situation that was never equalled even in the "Topper" pictures. Claude Rains plays "Mr. Jordan," a kind of heavenly train dispatcher and the cast includes Evelyn Keyes and James Gleason.

Waterfront Drama.

Wallace Beery forsakes western adventure for the waterfront and a tuna fishing fleet in "Barnacle Bill," playing today at the Majestic. As a waterfront loafer who courts the "lady blacksmith" from the picture "Wyoming," Beery is supported by Marjorie Main, Leo Carrillo, Virginia Weidler and Donald Meek. Filmed on the waterfront of Fish Harbor, picturesque center of California's tuna fishing industry the picture presents Beery as a waterfront roustabout who champions the cause of the fishermen and pays attention to Marjorie Main on the side. Tim Holt in "Dude Cowboy," is the second picture.

NAVY STARTS MERCHANT SHIP ARMING PLANS

FDR To Sign Measure Lifting Shipping Restrictions Monday; Vote 212-194.

gin to deliver munitions to British ports.

Knox said that American merchant ships will be armed as they come into port. The process may take months. Navy officers estimated that several hundred out of 1,200 merchant ships—including both those plying the Atlantic and the Pacific—will be armed.

The navy plans to put 10-man gun crews on the ships. They will be armed, officers said, with three to five-inch guns, which can be used either against submarines or airplanes.

During the World war, navy records show, 384 ships were armed. While no ecord of sinking of a submarine was established, the navy estimated that there were over 200 encounters between armed merchantmen and submarines, that 193 attacks were repulsed, and that 34 submarines were damaged.

Mr. Roosevelt, jubilant over the result, telephoned his congratulations to Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Floor Leader McCormack.

Secretary of State Hull said "it was an exceedingly wise and timely decision." Knox said the action insures that both the ships and the men will be available to deliver defense aid materials at Allied ports and "greatly increases promise of ultimate victory" for Britain, China and Russia.

After the vote administration leaders revealed that they believed yesterday morning they were beaten They appealed to President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, who responded by providing letters which were read to the house. Mr. Roosevelt not only declared that defeat of the senate amendments would discourage Hitler's foes, but would be applauded in Berlin. Both Mr. Roosevelt and Hull personally talked to wavering congressmen.

The margin of victory, despite work of leaders, was small. A switch of 10 votes would have sunk the senate amendments. The vote showed 189 Democrats, 22 Republicans and one American-Laborite for the bill, with 58 Democrats, 135 Republicans, three Progressives and one Farmer-Laborite against it.

Some Republicans blamed the vote upon the bill or the White House. They pointed out that the Republicans who voted for it represent [illegible] districts.

Many gave [illegible] the administration, including Rep. Gearhart (R., Calif.), Minority leader Martin (R., Mass.) and Sumners (D., Texas).

Some administration officials said that the defeat of the bill may be a blow to plans of more than 100 American vessels which were transferred to Panamanian registry in order to avoid the neutrality act. Many of these vessels are armed.

The action, which represents a marked change in American policy, may also result in intensification of the administration drive to rid the seas of Nazi submarines.

It may also stiffen the attitude of American officials in forthcoming conferences with Japanese diplomats.

Sweeney, Cleveland and John F. Hunter, Toledo - 11.

The Ohio vote for (Democrats) Reps. Harold Claypool, Chillicothe; Robert Crosser and Stephen M. Young, Cleveland; Jacob E. Davis, Waverly; Greg Holbrook, Hamilton, Michael J. Kirwan, Youngstown, William R. Thom, Canton and Dow Harter, Akron - 8.

ORDERS MARINES TO LEAVE CHINA

they landed at Shanghai to protect a base set up by the famed Commodore Matthew C. Perry in "opening the door" to Japan, which for centuries had been a hermit nation.

From their first landing until 1900 the marines were dispatched to China from time to time to deal with various outbreaks threatening American interests. One of the most famous expeditions was their participation in putting down the Boxer rebellion in 1900.

In 1927 the marine forces in China were augmented primarily to guard the Shanghai international settlement area because of fighting between rival Chinese factions. Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler commanded the marines in China at the time.

Mr. Roosevelt was silent regarding withdrawal of the marines from China while other units of the navy continue operating on Chinese rivers. He replied that the gunboats were under near constant use and had no connection with the marines.

He issued a warning against interpretation of questions whether the marines were being withdrawn to clear the decks for a showdown with Japan.

with much gratification in London.

This important step is regarded as yet another instance of the determination of the United States to afford to the countries resisting Axis aggression practical and invaluable assistance in the common cause.

Canada's Prime Minister Mackenzie King called neutrality revision the handwriting on the wall spelling the doom of the Axis powers." Commenting at Ottawa, he said "it means immediate, increased effective assistance to countries resisting aggression."

To the average German the small majority was an indication of the lack of a popular front. The Berlin press and radio stressed the opposition arguments, and informed quarters said authorized German reaction probably would be along the familiar line that "Roosevelt is driving his people into war."

At the Tokyo end of the Axis, one newspaper featured a dispatch which said that the president's foreign policy had been dealt a great blow by the defection of some Democrats who voted against the bill.

Domestically, Wendell L. Willkie blamed the close vote in part on "the administration's negligence and muddling in the solution of our industrial labor relations problem." He called for an immediate correction of these errors "which caused so many members of congress to vote to endanger our foreign policy upon which depends the hope of survival of freedom."

Two executives of the Keep America Out of War congress termed the vote "a hollow victory for the war party, shabbily achieved by the president's promise to outlaw strikes," and a warning "not further to provoke war with Germany, Italy or Japan."

NAZIS FINALLY SINK BRITISH PLANE CARRIER

Russians Launch Two Fierce Counter-Drives Near Moscow, Leningrad.

cate that she might have been sunk in the Mediterranean and this it did by giving the Mediterranean as the last theater of her operations.

The vessel was under the command of Capt. L. E. H. Maund, but whether the commander was among the "fortunately not heavy" casualties was not made public. Her normal crew was 1,575 men.

Meanwhile, Russia's armies before Moscow, pressing a tempestuous counter-offensive, were reported today to have driven the Germans out of 20 villages in the past 24 hours in the Kalinin sector, while on the northern front, the Soviet radio said Red troops had scored a break through the Nazi siege lines outside Leningrad.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported also that German shock troops had been thrown back from the outskirts of Tula, 100 miles south of Moscow, after a bloody two-weeks battle.

"The Germans were here yesterday. Today only their corpses are here," Tass said.

The news agency said the Germans hurled 15 consecutive tank attacks at the little village of Rodezhesny, on the southern outskirts of Tula, and gained a temporary foothold before being smashed back.

Loss of the Ark Royal was the greatest single blow suffered by the British navy since the avenged sinking of the battle cruiser, Hood, by the German battleship, Bismarck, between Greenland and Iceland last May 24.

The loss of the Ark Royal left the British, however, with more aircraft carriers than they had at the start of the conflict—seven in commission and two scheduled for completion in 1942, as indicated by the naval manual, Jane's Fighting Ships.

Those believed in operation are the Eagle, 22,600 tons, and the Furious, 22,450, both converted battleships; the 23,000-ton Illustrious, which has been repaired after a pounding in the Mediterranean; the Illustrious' newer sister ships, the Victorious, Formidable and Indomitable, and the small, 10,850-ton Hermes which carries 15 planes.

While the Germans frequently had claimed sinking the great flat-topped ship neither they nor the Italians had made any such claim recently and the first news of the loss was the admiralty's own communique.

The admiralty's "obituary" on the Ark Royal traced her "brilliant service" and recounted, among other things, that she had sunk, driven off or severely damaged more than 100 German and Italian ships.

The admiralty pointed in passing to German broadcasts repeatedly asking, "where is the Ark Royal?" after a heavy attack by German planes on Sept. 26, 1939. But, said the admiralty, the carrier was "undamaged and taking part in the search for the Admiral Graf Spee in the South Atlantic."

In the Far East crisis, relations between Japan and Russia took a turn for the worse as Moscow replied to Tokyo's protest over the sinking of the Japanese liner, Kehi Maru—allegedly hit by a floating Soviet mine—and informed quarters said all major Japanese claims were rejected.

Simultaneously, the Tokyo war office announced a drastic revision of Japan's conscription regulations, making scores of thousands subject to military service.

Axis reaction to the revision of the U. S. neutrality act—lifting a two-year ban against American merchant ships entering combat zones—was high-lighted by an explosive warning from Berlin.

Authorized Nazi quarters declared the next few days would show what a dangerous path the United States had taken and assailed congress had been duped by a false presentation of facts by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

On the Russo-German war front, Soviet dispatches reported a series of smashing counter-blows at Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of Moscow, at Maloyaroslavets, 65 miles southwest of the capital, and in the far north around the Arctic port of Murmansk.

In the Crimea campaign, a bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters asserted that German troops were "in front of Kerch, gateway to the Caucasus oil fields, with the city and harbor under the fire of Nazi artillery.

Yesterday, the high command declared German assault troops actually were storming the port.

Soviet reinforcements, some of them drawn from the Rostov-on-Don sector, were reported racing to defend the Caucasus coast against a German drive across the narrow Kerch strait from the Crimea.

thereafter; Hungarian partridge, four; and grouse, two the first day and four in possession thereafter.

Raccoon may be hunted with gun and dog until Jan. 16 and may be trapped from Dec. 1 to Jan. 16.

State conservation officials in Columbus today promised a better game crop than in previous years.

To substantiate this they said that 70,000 pheasants have been released this year and that the Milan state raccoon farm has produced 1,900 raccoon, the bulk of which have been released. The division released 16,276 rabbits last winter.

Meanwhile state health officials, encouraged by a 51 per cent reduction in tularemia cases so far this year, cautioned hunters and their wives to be on the alert.

Transmitted through contact with the flesh of infected animals, the disease can be avoided if rubber gloves are worn when the game is prepared for cooking.

UNION LEADERS REMAIN FIRM

Carry Fight For Closed Shop In Captive Mines To White House Today.

left the meeting as soon as the resolution was made public to go to the White House conference.

They and the steel officials had been summoned by President Roosevelt in an effort to settle the dispute without a strike.

The policy committee agreed to return to UMW headquarters for a meeting tentatively set for 2:30 p. m., at which time Lewis said he would report the outcome of the White House conference.

The text of the resolution, adopted by a rising vote, follows:

"Resolved, that the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America approves, commends and sustains the position taken and the policies followed by the president of the union and his associate officers in all matters heretofore affecting the captive mines dispute."

Lewis and two other CIO leaders were due at the White House at 11:15 a. m. to confer with Mr. Roosevelt and three steel company executives.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter, read to the house just before the vote to repeal important neutrality act restrictions, expressed hope that the conference would prove successful in keeping the mines in continuous operation.

"But if it is not successful," he added, "it is obvious that this coal must be mined in order to keep the essential steel mills at work. The government of the United States has the backing of the overwhelming majority of the people of the United States, including the workers.

"The government proposes to see this thing through."

The captive mines are owned by steel companies and supply fuel for mills essential to the armament program. Such mines employ 53,000 workers, the majority of whom belong to the UMW.

Mr. Roosevelt did not amplify his reference to the workers backing the government, but some quarters took this as an indication that he might expect the working miners, in the event of a strike call, to disregard their leaders and stay on the job.

The only point at issue in the long and fiery dispute was the UMW's demand for a union shop in the captive mines.

The fundamental disagreement between miners and operators on this point led to a three-day strike last month, ended by a truce until Nov. 15 (tomorrow) to permit defense mediation board to consider the question.

The board's recommendation against the union's demand was followed immediately by the resignation of Philip Murray, CIO president, and Thomas Kennedy, UMW secretary-treasurer, the only two board members who voted for the union shop. All CIO alternates on the board likewise resigned.

On other labor fronts, these were top developments:

The 14 non-operating railroad unions rejected the compromise settlement which President Roosevelt's fact-finding board recommended in answer to their demand for wage increases of 30 to 34 cents an hour over their current range of 33 to 85 cents. The board had suggested a 13½ per cent pay boost for the 900,000 union members.

Five operating brotherhoods representing 350,000 railroad men earlier had rejected the board's recommendation in their case and called a strike for Dec. 7. The non-operating brotherhoods did not mention a strike.

HAVE ROW OVER GAMBLING CASE

Prosecutor, Sheriff's Office At Odds Over Procedure In Raiding Tavern.

iffs who participated in the raid said they were criticized yesterday by Lutz and his assistant, Charles Freehafer, for not waiting until "a more opportune time" to close in on the tavern.

Defending his deputies, Sheriff Robinson said, "I'm convinced we were right in confiscating the equipment and making the arrest after the state liquor agent (John Barlow) reported there was gambling equipment at the Mayfair.

"If we had delayed the raid and given the operators time to get the equipment out of the place, this office would have been the object of criticism from all sides," he added.

"When I have definite evidence that there is gambling going on in the county, I'm going to do something about it without waiting for advice from anyone. We are not going to permit gambling if we know about it," Robinson asserted.

Freehafer admitted he talked to Deputy Glenn Freeman who headed the raiding party in the absence of Sheriff Robinson, but he said he "only discussed details of the case" and offered no criticism. Lutz said he had not talked to the sheriff or his deputies since Talbot was arrested Wednesday.

In a statement to The News-Journal, Lutz said he felt that "if the state liquor agent was sincere, he would have waited until there was someone operating the gambling devices and the 'real owners' were in the room before making the raid."

The prosecutor also said he had "been told the gambling equipment was going to be installed at the tavern and I was conducting my own secret investigating of the reports."

He added that he was not informed of the raid until it was over and the equipment had been confiscated and taken to the county jail by Deputy Sheriffs Freeman, John Whitcomb, and J. R. Hetler.

Sheriff Robinson agreed with Lutz that the "higer-ups" in the case had not been caught, but he asserted that "those fellows usually don't hang around the place waiting for it to be raided."

Deputy Sheriff Freeman said Talbot unlocked the upstairs room where the gambling devices were found and let the officers in with the statement, "there it is, boys."

The equipment included nine slot machines, a roulette table, two dice tables, and a card table.

Talbot, who is expected to go on trial within the next two weeks, is accused of "keeping and exhibiting for gain certain gambling devices."

The prosecutor said he did not question that there was sufficient evidence to convict on that charge. "And I'm going ahead to dig what I can out of this case, too," he said.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I could not hear my father's answering voice over the secret radio, but Harry Underwood's voice was trenchantly urgent as he went on with his message.

"Have locked all the doors and windows," he said. "Madge, Lillian and the nurse are in Lil's suite with the doors barricaded.

"I'm going back there as soon as I get this message over," Harry went on. "Now I may be all wet, but I think sending your men here is indicated."

Ready for Possible Capture.

"Okay," he said. "That will be fine. Instruct them to give the horn signal, and then the knock you and I use. I'll have a front window open a trifle, and will stay beside it.

"What's that? You bet. If we nab one of 'em I'll hobble him until you can take him down to the hideaway. By the way, Madge wants to go back to the hotel, and Lil insists on your sending a car and guard for her."

I was poised, ready for flight, when another sound, faint but unmistakable, came to my ears from below stairs; the basement, I decided, when it came again.

It was the sound of some tool working against wood. I guessed it was at a window casing. I had intended to race back to Lillian's suite as noiselessly as I had run away from it, so that Harry should not guess I had been in the hall.

I stooped and put my lips to the keyhole, cupping my hands around both my mouth and the keyhole.

"Harry!" I breathed softly. "Harry! Open the door quickly, please!"

I heard a muttered objurgation. "What the devil!" Then the key turned hastily in the lock and the door flew open.

He wasted no time in questions nor I in explanations. With a finger on my lips I seized his sleeve and drew him into the hall, then pointed down the stairs in the direction of the sound I had heard.

"Listen!" I whispered. "I think it's a chisel against the basement window."

Madge Disobeys Orders.

He bent his big frame toward the direction I had indicated, and when the rasp of the tool came again, more distinctly this time, he took my arm in an iron grip and spoke, prison fashion, into my ear.

"Go back to Lil's suite, do you hear?" he muttered, and there was grim command in his voice. Then he released me and ran lightly, on the balls of his feet, along the corridor.

I think it was the fact that he drew his revolver as he ran, and held it lightly in his right hand ready for action, that decided me to defy his orders. The sight of the weapon brought me the realization that in the next few seconds he would be facing similar weapons held by men who cared no whit for human life.

I had no illusions as to my own prowess, but I do know how to aim and fire my little silencer pistol. If I kept out of sight of both Harry and his adversaries, but near enough to act in a crisis, I knew the element of surprise and an unexpected deadly weapon might turn the scale. So I felt that I was justified in disregarding his orders.

But I knew better than to hamper him by appearing too soon, or by letting him know that I was in his vicinity, which I knew would cause him keen anxiety as well as anger.

I stopped at the top of the stairs and removed my shoes, then stole down after him in my stockinged feet. Luckily he did not look around, and I reached the bottom of the basement stairs unobserved before I had to find a place to hide from Harry, as well as from the marauders.

There was a small recess behind the last curve of the basement stairs and I dodged into this, just as Harry swerved to one side and took up his stand in an unused doorway that commanded the window from which the noise had come, but where he could not be seen from outside.

The noise of the tool was louder now. Then there came to my ears the sound of a window stealthily shoved up, and a gutteral voice saying guardedly:

"That does it! Come on now, punks!"

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, November 15

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SWIFT and sudden events of a thrilling nature are among the auguries of this day which are astrologically known as "mixed influences." While this unforeseen occurrence or visitation may be profitable and constructive, yet it will require much independence and liberality of thought and action in order to attain lasting benefits. Big issues are at stake and this is likely to pique enmity and opposition of a subtle or crafty nature. Do not be drawn into intrigues or ensnared by sinister strategies. Be discreet and restrained in all contacts, especially of an intimate nature. Do not quarrel.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a year of a sudden, surprising and dramatic turn of events, in which much profit and progress may arise from a rather radical, liberal, novel or even erratic and unprecedented occurrence or situation. Keeping free and independent of questionable alliances, intrigues or illicit contacts may result in surprising advantages. Dare to be original and ingenious, but use most discreet conduct in all affiliations.

A child born on this day although talented, original, ingenious and constructive, independent and liberal, yet may have tendencies to the erratic, eccentric or unconventional, which may cause it much trouble in life.

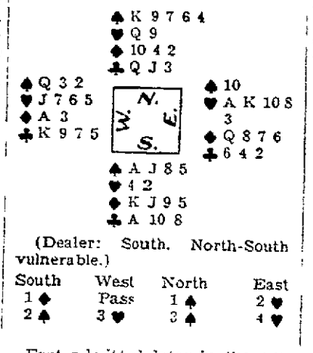
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN TO BID TOO HIGH

YOU HAD better not bid too high intentionally, when opposed to weaker players, unless you have learned how to capitalize on their mistakes. If you are one of those precise cardsmen who can get the best out of a hand when all goes efficiently, but are not so good on sensing an opponent's tendencies and cashing in on them, you will do well to bid no higher against weak competition than against strong defenders.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East

2 ♠	3 ♥	3 ♠	4 ♥

East admitted later in the evening that he never would have bid as he did if he had been against strong opposition. But he reckoned he would get some help somewhere along the line from his opponents, and he did. South led his spade A, then made mistake No. 1 by leading the spade 5 instead of the J. North fell in line by playing his K, ruffed by the heart 3 and setting up the spade Q in dummy.

After his heart A and K, East led the club 2. When South played the 8, all East needed to do to make his contract was put up the club K, lead the spade Q for a club discard and then concede a club and a diamond. But that club 8 tempted him. He put on the 9 and the J won. Back came the club Q, which he won with dummy's K. The spade Q was then used for a diamond discard and the club 7 led to South's A.

Poor South was end-played. With nothing left but diamonds and his spade J, he did not like to lead the latter, enabling East to discard dummy's diamond 3 and ruff in his own hand, so he led the diamond 5. This ran to the Q. The diamond A was taken, the diamond 8 put on the club 5, and two trumps completed the hand. It was the kind of very human bridge which is fun to watch.

HELPS FARMERS PAY OFF LOANS

Increased Income on County Farms Puts Delinquency at Low Figure.

Increased farm income is helping Richland county farmers pay off their indebtedness with 97 per cent of the 400 loans serviced by the Richland County National Farm Loan association in good standing, Vance Clever, secretary-treasurer of the organization, said today.

Less than one per cent of the loans are as much as four months delinquent, while approximately [illegible] per cent of the loans were on the delinquent list two years ago, Clever said.

He added that most of the farmers who have past-due loans have arranged to make payments on them within 30 days from the sale of hogs and poultry.

The 400 loans made to farmers by the Richland county association amount to more than $1,250,000, payable in semi-annual installments, Clever said.

Directors of the association are G. H. Culler, Monroe township; F. W. Dill, Jefferson township; Ray Williams, Troy township; R. R. Howard, Cass township, and J. B. Wolf, Mifflin township.

KENTVILLE, N. S.—(U.P.)—Paula Robinson, 14, had to knock out her 17-year-old friend Beatrice Ilsley with a blow on the jaw to save her from drowning. The two girls were swimming in a river when Beatrice suddenly went under in eight feet of water.

MODEL DEFENSE HOME OPENED FOR INSPECTION THREE DAYS

Mansfielders have been invited to inspect a model defense home, one of the 50 new homes to be constructed in the Country Club addition of the city under the better defense housing classification of the federal housing act.

The inspection will be held from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. today, tomorrow and Sunday. The homes are being constructed by Frank Cave, Mansfield contractor.

Ten of the homes are practically completed, 15 more are nearing completion and work has already been started on 25 more.

The home to be inspected by Mansfielders is a model home, completely equipped with a Westinghouse electric range, refrigerator, hot water, furnace and wiring devices.

Using the privileges of the FHA terms, Richland county residents have applied for mortgages of $2,000,000 for 500 dwelling units, and have received $400,000 in 1,288 individual loans for modernization and repair work.

The federal government has recently given impetus to local home building by placing Mansfield within the Title Six classification which allows contractors to receive up to 90 per cent in government loans on the new homes and then permits the purchaser of the home to take the debt off the contractor's hands.

In the Mansfield area, additional housing facilities are being developed in two ways; first, by the construction of new houses both by private capital and the government, and secondly, by the utilization of all available old houses after they are repaired, modernized and adapted to defense needs.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—"We must remember," wrote Mr. Roosevelt to Chairman Doughton, asking for greatly increased taxes, "that taxation is a necessary complement of price control because the continuing effectiveness of price control is largely the restriction of the demand for goods."

Johnson

"The president is completely right in this," said the New York Times. It went even farther and said that "taxation is the basic means of preventing inflation for it strikes at the causes of inflation, whereas price controls merely strike at the effects."

It would be of great benefit to this country to have this hoary nonsense argued to its death. Inflation means just one thing. It means high prices for what you buy.

Anybody that doesn't know that high taxes mean high prices should reflect that the tax per package on cigarets is six cents and that this alone makes that package cost him from one-third to one-half more than he would pay otherwise. Or if he drives an automobile he might ask the percentage of price that it made up purely of federal, state and local taxes. He will find that without these taxes his price would be from half to a third lower.

Nobody was ever more eloquent in making this point clear than Mr. Roosevelt in his speech at Pittsburgh in 1932. There he showed how nearly all taxes reached the housewives' market basket and said:

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

What these people are trying to say, and saying it precisely back-end-forward, is that higher taxes will make, not lower, but higher prices. They want higher prices because they say the common people, due to a defense boom, will soon have much money to spend and it is hoped to take it away from them in high taxes so that there will be more material available for government.

Well, some of the people are going to have more money to spend, but a whole lot of them are going to have less. As has been shown in recent columns and elsewhere, "priorities" unemployment, bankruptcies and distress threaten a serious disaster. Unless we are careful we shall have our country again "half-boom and half bust."

If we have price control, both halves will be benefitted. But if we begin to jack up prices by more and more fantastic taxes, while the "boom" half may be able to pay them the "bust" half can only do a little more starving.

Don't forget also that high prices due to exaggerated taxes are just one more burden to be laid upon the backs of future generations because they multiply the cost of the defense effort. Such increases in cost have already added billions to the burden.

With the widely advertised "victory" production which is to double our present effort the total cost would run to 120 billions. To put it flatly, that is more money than we can ever hope to pay.

We are going to run into some funny money business as sure as the sun rises—depreciation, repudiation or printing-press hocuspocus. I know it is heresy, but with such a prospect ahead it makes one wonder whether higher taxes isn't exactly the wrong answer and we should frankly start the monkey business now.

SENATORS ASK WHERE TO MAKE SPENDING CUTS

Call on Morgenthau For Recommendations on Non-Defense Slashes.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With members demanding that non defense spending be "cut to the bone," the special senate-house economy committee today called on Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau for specific recommendations as to how the curtailments may be done.

"Very substantial reductions in non-defense expenditures can and must be made," Sen. Byrd, (D.) Va., chairman of the committee declared. "It is simply up to us to determine how best to go about it."

Morgenthau, an ex-officio member of the special group, was asked to be specific about a statement he made several months ago during hearings on the tax bill, that $1,000,000 could be cut from civilian expenses.

Since then, the cabinet member has urged additional taxes, and has criticized the pending price control bill as a means of controlling inflation. Members said the results of the economy committee's work would be used also to help work out tax and price legislation.

Although both the administration and many congressional leaders have been loath to be specific when it comes to budget cuts, the senate finance committee recently directed Budget Director Harold D. Smith to outline plans for cutting as much as $2,000,000,000. His plan would have made the heaviest slashes in youth and agricultural aids and in relief.

The special committee to study non-defense budget cuts was created as a result of an amendment to the tax bill offered by Byrd. It is expected to hold a series of meetings and formally recommend certain cuts to the next session of congress Jan. 1.

While Byrd expressed the opinion that cuts would be made, other members were not so hopeful.

"I think substantial reductions can and should be made, but that doesn't necessarily mean they will," Sen. Glass (D.) Va., chairman of the senate appropriations committee, declared.

The need for warm winter blankets, comforters and other bedding among under-privileged Mansfield families is becoming apparent these late autumn days, according to the county relief office. Case workers are in a difficult situation, however, due to the suspension of the sewing project in which comforters were previously made and to the fact that the federal government will not continue supplies of this kind due to defense needs. The appeal for bedding is being passed on by the case worker, Mrs. Pearl Hautzenroeder, in the hopes that Mansfielders having blankets and comforters to contribute will notify the relief office.

Nearly 100 persons attended the annual duck dinner at North Lake park last night and some of them almost had to bring their own ducks. The duck crop at the lake was a little under par and the crowd bigger than usual, so a hurry call went out at the last minute for some extra ducks to make sure all of the guests would have enough. About 60 ducks were served. Most of them were raised at the park lake during the summer. Every fall the North Lake Park association stages a dinner at which the park ducks are served. Only enough are saved to provide breeding stock for the following year.

100 BUILDINGS WRECKED, GAS MAINS BROKEN

No Deaths or Injured Listed as Temblors Strike After Midnight.

(By United Press)

LOS ANGELES—Two of the heaviest earthquakes to strike the Los Angeles area in years today wrecked at least 100 small buildings and a huge oil storage tank, broke gas and water mains and damaged homes in the suburban Torrance-Gardena area.

"The whole business district is a shambles," said Torrance Police Chief J. H. Stroh.

Hardly a building was left undamaged, and many were knocked flat. Most of the damage was in the business district.

The quakes struck at 12:41 and 1:30 a. m. PST (3:41 and 4:30 a. m. EST) today, when theaters and business buildings were vacant. If they had come earlier there certainly would have been a casualty list, Stroh said, but he had received no reports of any deaths or serious injuries.

A gasoline storage tank broke and flooded Torrance pueblo, a hamlet of about 150 Mexican families. The fire department ordered the Columbia Steel company to shut off its furnaces because the area was saturated with gasoline.

Residents were evacuated and housed in the Torrance auditorium.

The Torrance-Gardena area is between 15 and 17 miles southwest of the Los Angeles business district, and was the most severely affected area.

The entire business district was roped off and no one was allowed to enter as a precaution against looting and the danger of falling debris.

Rubble was piled high in the streets. Vehicles could not pass.

The danger of a major conflagration in the debris was great. Gas mains broken by the shock sent their inflammable fumes over the scene and several thousand barrels of crude oil were spilled into the streets when a 55,000 barrel capacity storage tank was torn asunder.

Water mains were broken and telephone and telegraph and some power lines were down.

Torrance is an industrial community of oil refineries and steel mills with a population of 9,950. Gardena, an agricultural center adjoining, has 5,900 residents.

No casualties were reported from anywhere in the stricken region but minor damage was extensive throughout the 50-mile long and 40-mile wide area which felt the long rolling motion of the quakes.

The temblors lasted from 15 to 30 seconds. Downtown Los Angeles was shaken for 20 seconds in the first quake. It was not affected by the second shock which apparently was limited to the suburban area between here and Long Beach.

APPEAL ISSUED

Farmers Asked To Gather Up Scrap Iron For Defense.

Farmers in the Mansfield area were urged by Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture today, to turn all scrap iron on their farms over to junk dealers for use in the national defense program.

The Office of Production Management has been gathering scrap iron in cities, Wickard said in a letter to Mansfield junk dealers, but so far the rich farm field has been untapped.

Unless this is done and scrap provided for America's steel mills, production will be cut on construction of vitally needed weapons, he continued.

Farmers usually have a lot of obsolete equipment on their farms from which they take bolts and gears as other farm machinery fails. Aware that this practice is necessary and that the production of new farm equipment is curtailed, Wickard urged farmers to strip the absolute machinery of all bolts and other machinery which may become necessary and sell the remaining metal to junk dealers.

CHARGED WITH KILLING WIFE

Explorer Held After He Tells Police That Mate Died In Auto Crash.

(By International News Service)

MEXICO CITY — Dr. Arthur Torrence, 55-year-old explorer and authority on tropical diseases, was held by police at Monterrey, Mexico, today on a charge of murdering his wealthy bride, the former Mrs. Ada Loveland of Kalamazoo, Mich.

He was arrested three days after his wife had been buried and her death marked down as a routine accident case.

Mrs. Torrence, according to the doctor, died Saturday at the steering wheel of her automobile while driving south of Monterrey. According to police, Dr. Torrence said his wife swerved to avoid a truck and struck her head against the rear-view mirror.

At first this version of the accident was accepted and police permitted the body to be buried without an autopsy.

Later, however, the doctor was detained after Richard Loveland of Los Angeles, Mrs. Torrence's son, flew to Monterrey and investigated his mother's death, advancing the theory she was murdered.

Expecting to see active duty in England soon, Sgt. William R. Allen of the Royal Canadian Air Force will leave Mansfield Saturday night "to report to a base on the Canadian coast" after a nine-day visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey I. Allen, 18 Williams avenue.

"We may sail at once or within a week or two," said this 28-year-old Mansfielder, who received his "wings" last month and whose destination upon leaving here is a secret by government request.

Allen joined the R. C. A. F. last Februray. He was one of five men out of a class of 24 Americans to withstand the rigors of the training and win "wings." Two of the others were Akron men, Kenneth Dressler and W. C. MacMonagle.

The R. C. F. A. visitor, who came directly here from Uplands, Ottawa, expects to become a member of the Eagle Squadron, the only All-American flying squadron in the R. A. F. when he reaches England.

MANSFIELD ARTISTS GET READY TO DISPLAY WORKS AT LIBRARY

Mansfield artists were preparing today to hang their paintings for the first public exhibition of painting and sculpture to be held under the sponsorship of the Mansfield Art Council beginning Sunday, in the observance of National Art week.

Eighteen local artists will enter the exhibition held in the Larwill room and the main reading room of the Mansfield Public Library, Miss Marjorie Campbell, art instructor at Mansfield Senior high school and head of the Art Council, said.

Miss Ida Lemon, 203 East First street, is the oldest contributor to the exhibition from the standpoint of age. Miss Lemon, who will reach her 80th birthday Jan. 4, started her painting only recently and devotes herself to it purely as a hobby.

The Art Council and exhibiting artists will be present to receive visitors at the library Sunday from 3 to 5 p. m. and offer information concerning the show.

Arthur Louis Bromfield will be among the watercolor exhibitors and Louis Lamoreaux, architect, will enter sketches. Contributors include the members of the the Art Council, Margaret Twitchell Swank, Mrs. Larry Twitchell, Olive Scott Haber, Roland Miller, George Biddle and Miss Campbell, also the following exhibitors: Mrs. John B. Conrad, Mrs. Henry J. Paulsen, Miss Frances Hanson, Miss Ethele Duffey, Paul Bovard, Duke Yoakum, Edwin V. Cairns, Clarence Ullrich and Howard Taylor.

COURSE PLANNED

Training Program For Girl Scout Leaders Arranged.

Plans for a 12-hour leadership training course to acquaint new Mansfield Girl Scout leaders with the national and local program are now being made by Miss Eleanor Bond, executive secretary.

The first two- hour session will be held Thursday, Nov. 25, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms beginning at 7:30 p. m. and the time for the remaining classes will be fixed to accommodate the group.

Approximately 16 new leaders and assistant leaders will compose the class and among them will be several leaders from Plymouth, Ashland, Lexington and Lucas troops who desire training.

Removal from the city by a number of families has necessitated the replacement of leaders in several instances, Miss Bond said, and the organization of new troops also demands additional leaders.

SUES MOTORIST AFTER MISHAP

Warren Woman Says She Was Thrown From Auto When Car Struck It.

Civil suits for a total of $1,750 damages, one as the result of injuries received in an automobile collision, have been filed in municipal court, Frieda Gorby, civil deputy clerk, reported today.

Mrs. Angeline Antonell, Warren, asks for a judgment of $1,075 against Lindsay W. Johnson, Columbus, whom she says, was operating an auto which collided with another in which she was sitting.

The Warren woman states in her petition that Johnson was driving at a "highly dangerous and unlawful speed while out of control" and that his car crashed into another owned by her husband, George Antonell, Warren.

Mrs. Antonell says that her husband's car was parked on Lexington avenue, and Johnson's car struck it throwing her out of the car. She claims that she suffered a permanent spinal injury.

The other suit was filed by Arnold S. Nesheim, Billings, Mont., who claims that Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Fonkalsrud, 125 Brinkerhoff avenue, are indebted to him on a $500 note signed May 15, 1938.

CHAPTER XXII

"Do? Do, my dear?" she laughed. "Why she'd set her cap for him! If any attractive man appeared not to want her she could positively haunt him! I confess that Joy is spoiled. We must love her in spite of that. She has been so wealthy, so sought after because of her spectacular beauty—there are even publicity men here with us in these isolated mountains, of all places! Everywhere the photographers—"

Polly interrupted. "You are sure she would try to corral a good-looking man who—who held off, and didn't fall for her at once?"

Miss Carlson laughed gaily. "Of course. It's quite a fundamental thing, Polly. What comes easy we don't want. What evades us, we crave. We are all like that."

"I'm going to get up!" Polly declared. She arose at once and stood there a moment in her pajamas, the crimson silk ones that had been made in Mexico. They were a complement to Polly's ebony hair and her deep skin coloring. She was looking off at nothing, though, unconscious of herself.

"Don't get chilled, dear."

"Miss Carlson!" Polly dropped to her knees near the older woman, and spoke quietly now. "Do you think—tell me—could Joy possibly be made interested in Ward? Could she? Eagerness shone on her.

* * *

Miss Carlson reached to pat her hand. "You're so sweet, Polly. I don't know. I was just using his name as an illustration. But then, why not? Stranger things have happened. He is handsome. And quite different from the mill run of men. Come to think of it, she really was impressed by him when he gave her the fawn. Remember?"

Polly nodded gazing off now. She was biting her lip, thinking, brown eyes wide.

Then all at once Polly's lovely eyes narrowed.

Her pretty face took on a scowl. Perhaps too much of a scowl. She turned away from Miss Carlson for a moment and began slowly to dress. When she did speak again, though, it was in most surprising tone.

"You make her let Ward alone!" Polly said, angrily.

Miss Carlson looked out of the blankets in astonishment.

"You tell Joy—you must order her to, Miss Carlson—that Ward can't afford—can't tell her that Ward has his life all cut out for him! He wouldn't be interested in any city girl, Miss Carlson. Never! Tell her not to—not to upset him. She'd just be hurt."

Bettina Carlson sat upright in her own bed roll now, distress evident on her. She spoke very calmly. "Polly dear, of course I will, since you ask it. I had no idea I might distress you so! Of course I shall speak to Joy. But I must warn you—ordering her to stop would serve only to encourage her. She would only buck the more!"

"I don't care!" Polly snapped. "You tell her. You must!"

"All right, dear."

"Tell her Ward doesn't want to be bothered. Ward is not a—not a ladies' man. He never was. Not the type at all. He wouldn't respond."

"I understand."

"Promise?"

"Surely, since you wish it so."

Polly began dressing fast then. And, miraculously, her expression changed again. Miss Carlson noted with renewed astonishment that the scowl had vanished, the eyes were alert and eager as before. In a moment, when she was lacing boots, Polly actually began to hum a little happy tune. She went out of the room, leaving kindly Bettina Carlson in a state of interested confusion.

Outside in the main room of the cabin, Polly saw that Joy had braved the cold to walk out on the front porch with the photographer, and the syndicate writer. Ken Palmer was with Buck McMurray and Dr. Palmer outside feeding the saddle horses. That left brother Ward inside at the fireplace, cooking, momentarily alone. Polly hastened to him.

She kissed him quickly on the forehead by way of morning greeting, and when he turned with frying pan in hand to smile at her, she placed a finger on his lips.

"Wardy!" she whispered. "Listen carefully to me! Things are brewing! Mind every thing I say. You act cold toward Joy all day, you hear?"

"Cold?"

"Yes! Cold and disinterested. Be nice, but standoffish. Show off before her, Wardy. Strut your he-man stuff. Be the grand westerner that you are, and all. But don't talk much to Joy. Just kind of, uh, tolerate her. Show no personal interest in her at all!"

"But—"

"No buts! You promised to let me handle certain matters. All right, the game's on and you've got to do as the captain says!"

The rain stopped before 10 a. m. There hadn't been enough of it to do any damage, only enough to make lion hunting impracticable while it fell.

"We'll have early lunch," Buck McMurray said, "then we can get going by 1 o'clock. That will be time for some of the cats to have made fresh trails."

"Won't the wet ground be hard to trail on, Ward?" Joy asked him, strapping on pistol and ammunition belt. Pistols were sufficient to kill any mountain lions, Ward had said.

"No, Miss Boone," he spoke impersonally, as a lecturer might do. She looked surprised. "You see, the lions holed in during the rain even as we did. With the sun out, they'll be moving soon. Not much. Not as much as they will tonight. But whatever trail they do make today will be fresh so our dogs can lead fast. We stand a good chance!"

"You called me Miss Boone!" Joy affected a little pout.

"Aren't you Miss Boone?" Ward asked levelly. Then he turned disinterestedly from her. "I'll go see that the dogs are fed and ready."

She stood watching him depart, a little piqued. She couldn't understand Ward McMurray. He might be very genial and attentive to a girl, or he might seem detached from all consideration of her. He interested her more and more, she realized. She saw anew the powerful build of him. She remembered the few times he had danced with her, how he had occasionally lifted her and swung her with consummate ease. She saw his graceful strides now, and behind the evident efficiency of him in whatever he set about doing.

James Glenn the picture magazine photographer, and Terry Brookfield, syndicate feature writer, who had slept disgracefully late in camp this morning, came now to Joy.

"We're all set to ride," Glenn said. "Want to get some action shots. The sky is clearing, thank goodness."

"Will you want me or Polly?" Joy demanded. "You seemed very much taken with her yesterday."

"Ouch! Lay off that, Miss Boone. Surely you can't be getting jealous in your old age! I warn you there's a writer present."

* * *

He said that jokingly, but Joy realized it was a threat even so. Terry Brookfield was noted for his candid stories of personalities in the American Limelight. It was why he had been sent here. He'd pull no shots in giving his impressions of Joy!

"I'm sorry," she said. "I did sound catty, and I don't want to."

"Stout fellow!" Brookfield nodded, admiringly.

The three older people present—Mr. McMurray, sr., Dr. Palmer, and Miss Carlson — announced that they would not ride this first day because of the wet foliage.

"You youngsters go on," Polly's father urged. "You aren't afraid of anything. We have some planning for the college to do. Best place in the world to talk is up here. Mind you bring back a lion!"

That left only six in the party but that was enough. Ward led the way with the four hounds, Ken Palmer riding near to him. Joy moved up presently to be nearer to Ward. Polly with James Glenn and Terry Brookfield thus rode behind. Ken turned in his saddle and saw this chance arrangement. He reined in.

"Mind if I ride with you too, Polly?" he asked, when they had come up to him.

"Why Ken, of course not! Delighted to have you, silly! But am I the belle of the party to have three escorts? I thought you two were sent out here to, uh, write up Joy?"

They took the hint. In truth the time had come when they really had to stay near Joy, for they did have professional assignments there.

"Thanks, Ken," Polly murmured, when they had spurred on ahead. "They are nice enough, I suppose, but I'm glad to be rid of them!"

Ken looked angry. "Polly, if you just say so I'll go paste both of them."

"Why, Ken!" Her surprise was genuine, although his anger flooded her with a strange delight. "But no. No, they weren't annoying me that way."

"About last night—I couldn't help overhearing them when they—"

"Oh. Thanks so much, Ken. You're a darling. But I can handle them. I don't think they're as forward as they seem. Just types. But Ken, it's wonderful of you to—to feel this way. It makes me know you are my friend."

She winked and nodded at him then, quite unconsciously; a little gesture of intimacy, meaningless perhaps, but enough to send Ken's blood racing. He looked off self-consciously and the sense of confusion which had been in him often here lately assa... him again. He turned to look at Polly's profile as she rode there beside him. Their horses were moving at a fast walk. She swayed easily with every motion. Ken swallowed, realizing that never in history had there been a girl with such perfectly chiseled features or with such wholesome beauty as this one.

He was about to speak to her again, but up ahead Old Mag, the lead hound, sounded off: "Ow-u-u-u-u-u-u! Ow-u-u-u-u!"

"Step on it!" Ward McMurray yelled. "We've struck trail!"

He spurred as he spoke. Old Mag and her three companion dogs already had streaked up the slope, across a narrow canyon, and out of sight around a rise in the earth. Evidently the trail was fresh indeed.

In a moment the six horses here had sensed the quick excitement. Their ears laid back. Two of them snorted. All of them broke into a fast run, crashing pell mell through underbrush, avoiding rocks, snatching their riders unmercifully in a driving, pounding rush.

Original positions of the riders soon changed. Polly and Ken had crept up nearer to Ward. Joy's horse made a false start off trail and had to be brought back, so that she was riding then with the two men from New York again. These three thus were behind all the others, and presently the distance from Ward had stretched into a matter of 300 yards.

"Unh-h-h-h!" James Glenn groaned. "How much farther?"

"Don't know!" Joy shouted out one corner of her mouth. "Don't you like fast riding?"

"My side! It's killing me!"

She glanced at the two men then. Agony had come to show on both their faces. Joy understood. If you aren't accustomed to fast riding, don't know how to get in rhythm with the saddle's up-and-down, your lower lungs do develop an intense pain. She had experienced it herself. She knew these two city softies would be sadly out of condition.

MARKET WISE SETS NEW RECORD AT PIMLICO

BALTIMORE, Md.—(INS)—The 1941 turf season at Pimlico was closed today, but a new track record was in the books following the performance of Louis Tufano's Market Wise in the Bowie handicap, grand finale to the 13 day meeting.

Galion Excited By Pro Game

Record Crowd Expected To See City News Tilt.

GALION — Indications today were that the Galion Jaycees and Mansfield City News pros will play to the biggest crowd of the football season here Sunday afternoon.

* * *

With the game scheduled as a benefit affair for the high school athletic fund, Galion students are busy selling tickets for the big game, and the ducats are reported going rapidly.

Natural rivalry between the two towns, heightened by several weeks' argument in which each team accused the other of dodging scheduled games, has served to create more interest in Sunday's game than has been shown here in any football game in recent years.

Galion will have two Mansfield boys starting in its regular lineup, both former stars at Mansfield Madison high. They are Gene Harmon, who led high school gridders in the entire state in scoring several seasons ago, and Jack Priest, tackle.

DONELLI RESUMES JOB AS DUQUESNE COACH

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — A brief announcement from Duquesne university's publicity department disclosed today that Aldo T. (Buff) Donelli had resumed his job as head coach of the undefeated-untied Dukes, who meet the once-tied Maroons of Mississippi State here tomorrow.

Donelli gave up the post six weeks ago to take a fling at pro football. In his absence, Assistant Coach Steve Sinko had directed the team's affairs.

Little Boosts Record to 159

DENNISON — (U.P.) — Wilber (Lightning) Little, the state's leading scholastic football point-maker, boosted his season total to 159 points last night but his Newcomerstown eleven suffered its first defeat of the year, losing to Dennison, 25 to 13.

* * *

It was the last game of the season for Newcomerstown which had won its previous eight contests. Little tallied all 13 points to take a 21-point margin over Dick Pileiger of Mifflin, his only rival in the state scoring race with a chance to catch him.

Good Weather Promised for Tygers' Final Night Game

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Seems Canton McKinley fans have been hopping all over Coach Ben Schwartzwalder this week because of the injury suffered here last Friday night by his star halfback, Jack Crider.

Crider was helped off the field in the first half with an injured knee, and was carried from the field in the second half, with an injured knee.

Schwartzwalder, claim the Canton fans, should never have sent Crider back into the game with a bum knee. Now he's out for the rest of the season, with important games with strong Oak Park, Ill., and Massillon coming up.

* * *

Mansfield fans have been agreeing with the Canton fan flock on that argument, but it appears now that neither the Canton nor the Mansfield fans knew what they were talking about.

The Canton Repository explains, a bit belatedly:

"Crider suffered a charley horse, or knotted muscle in the LEFT leg in the first quarter. He was taken out, the leg was rubbed, and he apparently was in top shape when he returned to the field. Soon after he returned to the game he suffered torn ligaments just below the RIGHT knee."

No wonder they carried him out. First the left leg, then the right leg. He didn't have a leg to stand on.

Mansfield high coaches have joined the fight against the proposed change by the Ohio High School Athletic association from the intercollegiate rules under which high school teams in Ohio now play football, to the set of rules set forth by the National Federation of High Schools.

High school coaches of the state, in a meeting last spring at Columbus, voted unanimously against the change to the federation brand of rules, which would mean more than 200 rule changes for Ohio schools, and over 300 changes in rule interpretation.

But the Ohio High School Athletic association is composed of school principals, not coaches, and the change is reported to be a pet project of Commissioner H. R. Townsend who has revived the question in the association after the coaches voted against it.

James R. Robinson of Canton, president of the coaches' association, is mailing out more than 400 letters to coaches, urging them to induce their principals to vote against the change. Mansfield coaches already have done that, so I understand.

* * *

The change would be bad enough for coaches and players. But pity the poor fan. How can he grasp 500 changes in rules and rule interpretations when he can't tell the left leg from the right one, as in the Crider case?

GERRELL SETS PACE IN HUMPHRYES LOOP

15 Rams Get Grid Awards

Madison Players Given Awards at Annual Dinner.

By BUD SPRUNGER
(News-Journal Sports Writer)

Winding up football activities for the season at Madison high school last night, Coach Al Fendrick awarded 15 letters to gridders and announced Harold Hammer, left halfback, as the captain for next year's squad.

Awards were made at the annual football dinner sponsored by the school Boosters' club, which this year served its largest dinner with 275 fans attending the meet in the Madison gymnasium.

Harold Arlin, Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing company executive, served as toastmaster introducing the speaker of the evening, Tom Conley, former Notre Dame player, and now coach of John Carroll university.

Conley told of some of his experiences both as a player and a coach.

Preceding the announcement of the letter winners Al Kipp, Boosters club president, said that the club was hoping to see at least a hundred more memberships during a drive now in progress.

Letters went to Bob Anthony, Reynold Bell, Bob Fletcher, Jack Fletcher, Bob Garn, Joe Harfman, Delbert Poston, Stan Rinehart, Max Roberts, Jack Spristerbaugh, Don Stone, Ken Windsor, Billy Wynn, Paul Wynn and Frank Keller with managers awards going to Loyal Neibel and Russell Hulit.

As he awarded the letters, Fendrick said that this year the team made good a promise he made last year when he promised that this year the team would win more games.

This year the team won five, lost two and tied one contrasted with a one-win record last yar.

Irish Shoot For Record

First Notre Dame Team In 11 Without Losses.

EVANSTON, Ill.—(AP)—An 11-year gap in Notre Dame football fortunes challenges a little band of Fighting Irish who'll charge into Northwestern's tough Wildcats at Dyche stadium next Saturday.

It's a far cry back to 1930, Knute Rockne and Notre Dame's last undefeated team, one which won 10 games and lost none. That team—and many before it—had reserve strength in every position, with Rockne using shock troops pulled from third, fourth and fifth elevens.

It's different with the 1941 Irish under Frank Leahy, who started practice with a comparatively slim half-hundred candidates.

From that half-hundred Leahy culled some 20 players who've carried the load through seven games without defeat. And Notre Dame believes those players will be good enough to take the Northwestern hurdle before winding up with a triumph over Southern California next week.

Given a dry field, Notre Dame will be slight favorites to take Saturday's battle, to be played before a sell-out crowd of 48,000 fans.

A sophomore, Angelo Bertelli, already ranks as one of the greatest first-year passers in recent intercollegiate history. Through seven games he has completed 52 out of 89 tosses for 813 yards. He's had almost perfect protection, in some games getting as much as 8 to 10 seconds to spot his receivers. His biggest test will come Saturday—against Northwestern's line.

That Wildcat line is tough. It held Minnesota helpless on the Wildcat two yard marker. It's going to rush Bertelli Saturday as he's never been rushed before And if this Wildcat line gets the jump on the Irish forwards, Otto Graham, Bill De Correvont George Benson and Don Clawson may put a big hole in Notre Dame's dream of football empire.

PGA PURSE HIKED FROM $6,000 TO $14,200

CHICAGO — (INS) — Professional golfers had a new incentive today to win the annual PGA crown—the highest cash award in the history of the classic.

A boost in the PGA tournament purse from $6,000 to $14,200 was voted by delegates at the PGA convention yesterday. As a result of this increase, the PGA winner next year will collect $5,000 instead of the $1,100 won by Vic Ghezzi at Denver this year. Second place will be worth $2,000 instead of $600 as formerly.

BULLS MEET BENGALS

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Their undisputed leadership threatened as a result of last Sunday's surprising 14-7 defeat at Buffalo, the Columbus Bulls close their American league season Sunday by taking on the rejuvenated Cincinnati Bengals at Red Bird stadium.

KENT HOPES TO BEAT AKRON AND SHAVE

KENT—(AP)—The gridders of Kent State university have a compelling incentive to beat Akron University tomorrow.

After the Flashes started a tailspin against Case Oct. 10, they swore they wouldn't shave until they won a game. They haven't triumphed since—and the bearded football players don't want to keep their whiskers over into next season. 6

Touchdown Tactics

By GEORGE A. MUNGER
Univ. of Pennsylvania Coach.

THE SITUATION: Your team, as the result of a fumble by the opposing team, has scored a touch down. You have scored another on the return of a punt by one of your backs who made a long run after receiving it. In both instances your team missed scoring the point after touchdown due to the aggressive charge of the opposing line and its blocking tactics. Despite your 12 to 0 lead the opposition gains at will through your line, although it cannot score early in the game. In the second half your foes score a touchdown and add the extra point, making it 12 to 7. Late in the fourth period you intercept a pass in your own territory and carry the ball to the opposition's eight yard line. Three plays carry the ball to the two yard line and it's fourth down in front of the goal posts.

George Munger

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

1. Running play for a touchdown?
2. Pass play for a touchdown?
3. Reverse?
4. Try field goal?
5. Field goal formation and pass?

(Answer in tomorrow's paper).

YESTERDAY'S PROBLEM
By DANA X. BIBLE
Texas Football Coach.

THE SITUATION: Your team has the ball in the middle of the field, second down and two yards to go. It is in the middle of the last quarter and the score is tied 0-0. There is a slight wind in your favor.

Most of the game has been played out of the scoring zones, neither side having been consistently successful in completing passes or breaking away. You have, however, been able to make a couple of yards almost every time your fullback took the ball into the line. The other team has kept its secondary up to bolster its line, with halfbacks in position to assist the defensive ends on wide plays and to blanket the flanks on short passes. The opposing secondary is alert and noted for its pass defense. Your passer is strong-armed but not always accurate. Your kicker is proficient at "coffin-corner" punts and quick-kicks. The lines are well-matched. Given the following choices

BIBLE'S TOUCHDOWN TACTICS ANSWER

I would pass, for the following reasons: A long pass, down near the goal line, will mean a touchdown if completed and will hurt you little if intercepted. An interception is unlikely if the ball is thrown away from the safety man, as the halfbacks will have to be looking for a run. If it is incomplete, you can still try for first down on the next play. If you run the ball on second down and make your two yards, you're still 48 yards from the payoff line. A long pass behind a halfback can do you little harm and might do you a lot of good.

Lobert May Get Nod as Manager

PHILADELPHIA — (U.P.) — The possibility increased today that John B. (Hans) Lobert, veteran coach of the Philadelphia Phillies, would be named manager of the club for 1942.

"I haven't any official announcement to make concerning a manager for 1942 now," President Gerald Nugent said last night. "But I will have something at the minor league meeting in Jacksonville."

* * *

Nugent said that Lobert, former third baseman with Cincinnati, the Giants and the Phils, would accompany him to the minor league meeting. If named, Lobert would succeed J. Thompson (Doc) Prothro.

Buckeyes Wind Up Home Grid Appearances Against Illini

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS — (AP)—Ohio State winds up its at-home football campaign Saturday, meeting Illinois for the 28th straight year—the longest unbroken rivalry in Buckeye annals. It's homecoming day for the Ohioans, and 50,000 fans are expected to "sit this one out" in the big Buck stadium.

The "Illibuck," which annually goes to the victor, has been housed on the Ohio campus since 1935, the year after Coach Bob Zuppke's Redmen beat Francis Schmidt's Bucks 14-13 to ruin their victory string. Illinois has won two non-conference contests this year and has lost four other games, but the invaders are planning to take that Illibuck home.

However, Ohio State's record of five wins and one defeat puts the Bucks in the "favorite" role, and the charges of Paul E. Brown are expected to win while keeping their attack covered from the prying eyes of Michigan scouts, next Saturday's opponent.

It was just 25 years ago that Ohio beat the Illini for the first time, the immortal Chic Harley scoring the touchdown and then changing shoes to kick the point that brought home a 7-6 victory. In 27 games, since Zuppke became head coach at Illinois, the Ohioans have won 15, lost 11 and tied one.

The 1934 victory was Illinois' lone win in the last 11 years over the Bucks, but Ohio has plenty of respect for the oft-defeated and undermanned invaders. Too many times has an under-dog Illinois team upset the local lads, for them to be over-confident.

The Illini were due to arrive in the Buckeye capital at 2:55 p. m. today, and they had a short workout scheduled on the stadium turf before retiring to a hotel for the night. Ohio's stalwarts, too, had a warm-up session slated before going to a country club until game time.

* * *

The Bucks, with the exception of Guard Lin Houston, were in fair physical condition for the game. Several second and third stringers, including End Pete Hershberger and Halfback Paul Sweeney, were on the shelf with various injuries, but the main cogs in the machine were ready to start whirling.

Free Scoring Tilt Planned

Northwestern Mentor Hopes To Beat Irish.

EVANSTON, Ill. — (AP) — Otto Graham matching Angelo Bertelli, pass for pass. . . . Don Clawson duplicating Dippy Evans, stride for stride. . . . And Northwestern equalling Notre Dame, point for point—with a few extra thrown in at the end for the Wildcats.

That's Lynn Waldorf's happy dream for tomorrow's meeting of his Northwestern team and Notre Dame's unbeaten Irish. He foresees a lot of points—the more the merrier, says he.

Just as a fortune-teller can't cook up a vision in a fogged glass bowl, so Waldorf can't conjure his vision in cloudy skies. He wants it clear and dry tomorrow, for although he knows the Irish will operate most smoothly under such conditions, he also realizes the Wildcats will have their best chance on a solid field.

Waldorf, even though his Wildcats have lost two important games—to Minnesota and Michigan, keeps in high spirits by reading quotes from South Bend, such as this remark credited to Coach Frank Leahy:

"We don't like to be pessimistic, but our squad is really banged up a lot more than I thought."

And here is Waldorf with his No. 1 right tackle, Leon Cook, and Cook's No. 1 replacement, Tony Samarzia, both out with injuries.

The safest bet on the game was the prospect of a full house, the last of 48,000 tickets having been sold Oct. 3.

Crowd of Over 4,000 Expected for Tonight

Forty-Year Rivalry With Shelby Probably Ends With 1941 Battle

FOR the first time since the opening game of the season with Akron West, Mansfield football fans looked forward to good weather tonight for a home game at Stadium field where the Shelby Whippets will face the Tygers in probably the last game of the 40-year rivalry between the two schools.

George Sherman, director of ticket sales at Mansfield high school, reported a brisk advance sale for tonight's game, and predicted a crowd of more than 4,000 will be on hand to see the Tygers and Whippets battle.

* * *

Tied only by mighty Massillon, and almost as mighty Canton McKinley, and victor over every other opponent by top-heavy scores, Mansfield will be favored to win tonight's game by just about whatever margin it chooses.

However, Mansfield has been favored almost as highly in some seasons past, only to have a fighting Whippet aggregation spring an upset, and the Tygers will be looking for Shelby to spring every trick in the book tonight.

Coach Paul Snyder of the Tygers said today he would stick to his earlier plan of three changes in the Mansfield lineup for tonight's game, starting Bill Doolittle at fullback, John Butler at blocking back, and Jim Burrage at end.

The change gives him two runners for the left half position, Ken Krupp and Chuck Condon, while Burrage will give Joe Romano's swollen knee a chance to return to normal in time for the Thanksgiving game with Fremont.

The rest of the starting lineup will find the Mansfield regulars in their usual positions, as Coach Snyder continues the system he has followed throughout the season: "Win the game first, and experiment later."

* * *

Officials for tonight's game will be Jim Fox of Wooster, referee; George Donges of Ashland, umpire, and Tony Lonero of Ashland, head linesman.

Hunters Get Safety Plea

State Tells Danger To Woodland of Cigarets.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—"Watch that match and cigaret!" was the admonition offered today by Ohio Fire Control Forester John A. Bastian to the state's army of hunters taking the field Saturday for the opening of the rabbit-pheasant season.

"Advent of the fall hunting season," Bastian said, "usually marks a period of severe damage to Ohio's timber lands because of the carelessness of certain hunters."

He pointed out that fires starting in dry grass and brush lands sweep quickly into timber areas and cause serious damage.

* * *

To fight the fire menace, Bastian advised hunters:

"Don't throw hot matches, lighted cigarets or pipe ashes into grass or leaves. Use the heel of your shoe to cup a hole in the moist soil, and press the burnt match or tobacco in to the dirt.

"Don't start a camp fire adjacent to dry grass or timber lands. If a camp fire is to be started, rake a ring around it down to mineral soil before it is lighted. Never leave a cap fire until it is completely out—and no fire is really out so long as it is smoking."

* * *

Bastian said a Jackson county spokesman told him of an 80-acre tract in that county where in former years he had never failed to bag the limit of squirrel or grouse. The area was swept by fire last spring, and the Jackson countian, in two days of hunting this fall, failed to flush a single bit of game.

Find Gridder Too Old for Age Limit

HAMILTON—(AP)—Because "it was the sporting thing," Principal John O. Fry said today, Hamilton high school has cancelled its seven football victories of this season.

* * *

The wins were erased after it was disclosed that Bill Cropenbaker, the team's top-scoring fullback, was over the 20-year age limit for scholastic football.

* * *

Cropenbaker, a 190-pound senior, voluntarily yielded information that he "just cut a year" from his age upon enrollment in junior high school in 1938. Grade school records showed he was born May 19, 1921.

Coach Dana X. Bible, to whom the boy told his story, described the lad's tale as "silly" gave it no credence.

REPORT HEALTH IMPROVES IN BOMB SHELTERS

British Make Study of Effect of Living In Air Raid Quarters.

(Special News Service)

NEW YORK—Britain's air raid shelters, despite their reported crowding last winter, improved both physical and mental health.

The effects seemed to be a combination of misery loving company and courage inspired by numbers.

The health effects are one finding of psychologists, reported in the official science journal, Nature. Of those who went to communal shelters, this study says, 95 per cent were reported to have obtained adequate sleep.

Weight which had been lost at home was regained, and neurotic symptoms disappeared. Individual shelters, where they were available, were neglected not only because the communal shelters were safer, but because the presence of crowds reduced anxiety.

Worries were voiced whether the civil morale will be as good this winter as last in case of renewed mass air raids. In heavily raided areas—other than London—the psychologists said that while morale was good in general, there were instances of failures and definite tendency for morale to deteriorate.

Cited as signs of loss of morale were unauthornzed or unnecessary running away from bombing dangers, general depression about the war and criticism of the government.

Not all the signs were on the bad side of the ledger. Although persons in the more heavily raided areas were more critical and depressed, they were nevertheless more active in air raid precaution work. They saved more money.

These most heavily raided persons were found more inclined to reject the idea of undertaking reprisals on the Germans.

An aid to raising morale was the presence of authoritatively appointed leaders in the raid shelters. This substituted for family authority and, the psychologists said, was an important factor agaainst shock.

In one shelter where a good leader was chosen, there were religious services, lectures and Christmas decorations, whereas there had not previously been even a broom to keep the place clean.

The psychologist said that assurance is needed, if morale is to continue, that efforts are being made to increase the safety of shelters.

Children were a special problem. Their greatest protection came from associating with adults who had a calm attitude toward the raids. World war experiences were studied to show that children lacking this kind of adult association in bombings are likely to develop serious nerve troubles.

In many cases small children were helped by having a vacation from their mothers. In badly bombed areas these babies had developed unsatisfactory relations with their mothers. The psychologists, however, found that complete seperation from mothers was bad and that solution of the child troubles is difficult.

Child education was declared to be suffering. In Glasgow the children were about one year behind the average in reading. It was suggested that this situation may be worse in areas that have been raided over a longer period than Glasgow.

Check this list of cars and select the car and monthly payment that you think will best suit you. (Remember, the monthly payments shown include tax, title, insurance and carrying charges.)

2.
After you have selected the car that will best suit your needs and pocketbook your next step is to pay a visit to Weidner's heated used car showroom. There you can see the car you have in mind and fully discuss the terms of payment with one of the salesmen present.

3.
Then all that remains for you to do is to make the usual down payment (your present car will probably cover this) and drive away in the car of your choice. You can rest assured that you will have trouble-free driving because every car is thoroughly reconditioned and covered with a written guarantee.

WESTINGHOUSE JOINS UPWARD MARKET TREND

Stocks Show Signs of Move Along Recovery Path By Leading Issues.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market today acted as though it would take off its wraps and try a workout on the recovery path.

Given an early lift were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse and Woolworth.

Among encouraging items scanned in boardrooms was the survey of Dun & Bradstreet estimating this week's merchandising activities throughout the country topped the comparable period a year ago by 12 to 18 per cent.

The federal reserve board, however, indicated there was a slight flattening out of the year-to-year upturn in department store distribution.

City Officials Receiving Many Requests as Levy Assures New Equipment.

board of control after city council has made appropriations for the work. The board is composed of the mayor and service director.

The levy revenue will approximate $135,000 in the five years it will be in effect. The city will spend $65,880 for new fire apparatus and equipment; $10,800 for remodeling Station No. 1; $4,320 for remodeling Station No. 4; $27,000 for buildinga new fire station in the west end of the city, and $27,000 for the improvement and extension of the fire signal system.

Although no decision has been made as yet, City Auditor Paul L. Kelley believes that the city will have to restrict its annual levy expenditures to the amount set aside for each project for each year. The total amount for each division of the levy, according to Kelley, could not be spent until the five years collection has been completed. If the city desires to spend the money all at once, he pointed out, it would have asked for a bond issue rather than a levy vote.
